

Burkhart Archaeology Scholarship

Department of Anthropology
Southern Illinois University Carbondale

ELIGIBILITY

The Daniel and Kate Burkhart Archaeology Scholarship was established to assist undergraduate students in their studies at SIUC. The applicant must have declared Anthropology as his/her major and must be primarily interested in Archaeology. Special consideration will be given to applicants who are participating in a field school or other archaeological research, but all interested, eligible undergraduate students should apply.

STIPULATIONS

The Burkhart Archaeology Scholarship will be deposited to the recipient's SIUC Bursar account to offset tuition and fees during the following academic year. Only students who will still be enrolled at SIUC during the following academic year are eligible. Typically one half of the scholarship will be deposited in the student's Bursar account for the fall semester and the second half deposited for the spring semester. If a scholarship awardee does not enroll in classes during the spring semester of the award year, the payment scheduled for January will be cancelled. An alternative payment schedule can be arranged if the award will be used for tuition for SIUC's summer field school. Total amount available for the award is $6,000, which may be given to a single awardee or split among several awardees if there are multiple, high-quality applicants.

SELECTION CRITERIA

The selection committee will evaluate applicants on the following three criteria:

1. The strength of your Application Form,
2. Your current Grade Point Average (GPA, minimum 3.30), and
3. Faculty recommendation(s).
